Bendover,s run report

With the weather looking to close in Bendover sent the pack off right on time with the instructions it should only take an hour to do!

The trail went down Fryett St across the hwy next to the old servo then headed down the hill towards the Waverley Woolen Mills.

Rickshaw led the pack with Tiles & Thumbs & Electric in toe the trail led to a check on the corner of Ravenswood Rd where the trail was found heading across the bridge to Newstead, on the town side of the bridge the arrows pointed down the bank to the North Esk River trail and continued following the river where Tiles got his nice new shoes wet.

Once the water & mud was finished the trail continued around the dog park back to the main trail on a loop to find the on home where the hashers helped themselves to the smorgasbord of black-berry's on the way home. A good run spot on an hour and the rain stayed away all night.

Joke of the week

A child gets home. His mom and dad are at table. His dad asks, "Why did you took so long, boy?" "I was at the library, studying for an exam". The detector beeps. The father explains, "this is a lie detector, boy! You better tell the truth..." "Ok, ok, I was at a friend's house and we were watching a Christian film..." The detector beeps. "Fine! It was a p*rn!" The father looks at him disapprovingly, "I'm ashamed of you! At your I age I never lied to my father!". The detector beeps. His wife bursts into laughter. "Well, he certainly is your son!" The detector beeps.

A wealthy 60-year-old man shows up at the country club with his new smoking hot 22- year-old wife. His friends are amazed. "How did you convince her to marry you?" "It's simple", he said. "I lied about my age". "Did you tell her you're 50?", they reply. He shakes his head. "40? There's no way she believed you!" He shakes his head again. "How old did you tell her you were, then?" He smiles and says, "85".

What is even worse than waking up after a party and finding a pen*s was drawn on your face? Finding out it was traced.
